Captain Ken Clark, above, from the Berea Police Department addresses neighbors on Elm Street about setting up a Neighborhood Watch. Residents on Elm Street suffered a rash of burglaries a few weeks ago, and started to organize in response.

Nightmare on Elm Street?

Neighbors Organize in Response to Rash of Robberies

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

In the aftermath of a rash of robberies that took place all in one night, residents living on Elm Street in Berea decided it was time they started talking. Conversations at 1:30 a.m. on Elm Street, with victims gathering to speak to each other and to police, gradually turned into planning for a time and a place to share. Pat Acevedo hosted the initial meeting for her neighbors to discuss the crime wave that occurred over two weeks ago on Elm, and that first interaction led to a potluck on Tuesday night when Captain Ken Clark of the Berea Police Department talked to the neighbors about a Neighborhood Watch.

"It used to be that people knew the officer who patrolled their neighborhood and they knew everyone else, and all the people who came around," Clark said, when addressing the Elm Street neighbors on Tuesday. "But now

Storm Water Program To Cost City A Bundle

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The Berea City Council heard from City Engineer Sandy Camargo of CDP Engineers on Tuesday night, on the Storm Water Management Program the city is now required to join. Berea has been enrolled into this EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) because of the city's passing the 10,000 population threshold in the 2010 Census. This triggered the automatic placing of Berea into the unfunded federal and state mandate that could prove to be an expensive proposition for the city. Richmond is also a city enrolled in the Storm Water Management Program, though Madison County is not because it lacks the required population density.

"Funding this program is probably the biggest challenge these enrolled cities face who already have stressed general funds," Camargo said. "It often needs dedicated funding from a new revenue source."

Originally coming from the Clean Water Act, the storm management program's intent for cities is to "protect or improve the overall quality of our nation's waterways." The program includes

Carved Cane Benefits Community

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Eleven woodcarvers from the Berea Welcome Center Woodcarvers participated in making the friendship cane this year, much like the friendship quilts that woman have made over years.

An annual project, each woodcarver who wants to participate gets a square block of wood to carve as a piece of the cane. They all have holes drilled through the middle, and a wood dowel connects them. The woodcarvers, tourism and other friends have sold the raffle tickets all year for the cane. This year proceeds went to Gilmin Group, a non-profit run by Travis and Christie Lynch for people in need. There was $576 raised for the Group.

Despite Money Woes, Berea School Votes Against Tax Increase

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

While the Berea Community School Board made a tough financial decision Monday night after hearing some harsh financial news, they also received a positive academic report, that last year's Berea Community juniors are predicted to rate in the top 20 – 25 schools in Kentucky regarding their ACT scores.

Berea Community has seen a steady increase in ACT scores for the past several years.

"I wish the audience had stayed to hear some of this school news," school board member Linda Wagers said.

Wagers referred to the audience that showed up for the property tax hearing on Monday night, scheduled before the regular school board meeting. At their planning meeting two weeks ago, the board discussed raising the tax revenue by four percent, which would equal a new tax rate of 94 – the full amount allowed without a voter referendum. The board was split on the issue, with some arguing that the school needed to stick with the current tax rate, in solidarity with a community that was struggling during the tough economic times. Other board members argued that the rate increase needed to happen in order to keep up the quality of education for the children and also weather the economic storms of the future.

BEREA POLICE REPORTS

Police Reports from 8/07/12 - 8/13/12

Theft

On August 7, officers were called to the Appalachian Federal Credit Union in reference to a theft. The victim reported that tools were taken from a vehicle in the parking lot. The estimated loss was $2,830.

Burglary

On August 8, a victim from the 200 Block of North Broadway reported that items were stolen from inside his residence. The victim stated that he was gone for a couple of days and noticed the theft when he returned. The estimated loss was $150.

On August 9, officers were called to the Berea Landfill in reference to a burglary. A window was broken out and several tools were taken. The estimated loss was $200.

On August 13, officers were called to Mitek Computers on Jefferson Street in reference to a burglary. A rear window was broken and items were taken from inside the business. The estimated loss was $500.

Property Damage

On August 9, officers were called to Knights Inn in reference to property damage. The victim reported that one of the doors on a motel room had been kicked. The estimated loss $1,000.

Disorderly Conduct Arrest

On August 13, officers were called to the 200 Block of Melody Court in reference to a noise complaint.

When the officer arrived, he could hear loud music coming from a residence. He contacted the resident, and asked him to turn the music down. When the officer walked back to his vehicle, the subject began to yell at him. The officer went back and asked him to lower his voice several times, but he continued yelling and cursing. Officers arrested Michael Fortson, 34, of Berea and charged him with disorderly conduct.

Drug Arrest

On August 15, officers located a suspicious vehicle in the parking lot of Indian Fort Theater. There were two people in the vehicle, and officers noticed the driver reaching in to his waistband as they were talking to him. They asked both occupants to step out of the vehicle and the driver again reached in to his waistband.

Officers located a pill container with methamphetamine and oxycodone inside. As the passenger got out of the vehicle, the officer noticed a used syringe and a metal spoon with green residue on it inside the vehicle. The items were next to the passenger seat.

Officers arrested James Jackson, 41, of Richmond and Chelsea Ruble, 20, of Berea. Jackson was charged with first degree possession of controlled substance - methamphetamine and first degree possession of controlled substance - oxycodone. Ruble was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia and first degree possession of controlled substance.

On August 16, an officer observed a vehicle in the parking lot of Shell on Peggy Flats Road. When the driver saw the officer, he immediately got out of his car and appeared to be nervous. The officer made contact with him and discovered that the man had a warrant for his arrest.

Two other people that were in the vehicle were located inside the store. Officers got consent to search the vehicle, and located several items inside used to manufacture methamphetamine. The items included rock salt, coleman fuel, coffee filters, rubber tubing and a funnel. Officers arrested Thomas Bullen, 27, of Mount Vernon, Emmanuel Pugh, 25, of Berea and Amy Thomas, 30, of Berea. All three were charged with manufacturing methamphetamine.

Pugh was also charged with drug paraphernalia possession because of a used syringe that was located in his pocket.

Shoplifting Arrest

On August 16, officers were called to Walmart in reference to a shoplifter. Store employees stated they observed a woman hiding merchandise inside a bag. She then tried to leave the store without paying for the items that totaled $18.68.

When they made contact with the subject, she had a strong smell of alcohol, slurred speech and bloodshot eyes. Officers arrested Robin Powell, 45, of Berea and charged her with theft by unlawful taking -- shoplifting and alcohol intoxication.

On August 16, an officer conducted a traffic stop on Chestnut Street for a minor traffic violation. When he made contact with the driver, he noticed a Coleman fuel container in the vehicle.

After obtaining consent, the officer located several other items used to manufacture methamphetamine including rock salt, tubing, a funnel and liquid drain cleaner. Officers arrested John Dixon, 32, of McKee and Jason Dixon, 36, of McKee. They were both charged with manufacturing methamphetamine.

Identity Theft Arrest

On August 19, an officer conducted a traffic stop on Bob O Link Drive for a minor traffic offense. The officers obtained consent to search, and located checks on the driver that did not belong to him.

The police made contact with the owners of the checks, and found out that the driver had taken them without permission. After an investigation, officers learned that the subject had also applied for a credit card in someone else's name. The victim discovered it after receiving a letter in the mail.

Officers arrested Joseph Jackson, 22, of Berea. He was charged with receiving stolen property under $500 and theft of identity of another.

PUBLIC NOTICE

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR MEDICAID ENROLLEES THAT IMPACTS OPEN ENROLLMENT BEGINNING ON AUGUST 23.

KentuckyOne Health Terminates all Contracts with CoventryCares

KentuckyOne Health has sent notice of termination of all contracts with CoventryCares of Kentucky which operates as a Medicaid managed care organization (MCO) under contract with the Commonwealth of Kentucky's Cabinet for Health and Family Services. These terminations will be effective for the former Saint Joseph Health System facilities on December 1, 2012, and for the former Jewish Hospital & St. Mary's HealthCare on November 1, 2012.

CoventryCares is one of four MCOs providing managed Medicaid services for Kentucky Medicaid recipients. KentuckyOne Health is contracted to participate with and WILL CONTINUE TO HONOR KENTUCKY SPIRIT, WELLCARE AND PASSPORT.

On April 27, 2012, Our Lady of Peace, part of KentuckyOne Health, received a letter of termination effective July 18, 2012 from CoventryCares, through their contractor, MHNet Behavioral Health for Our Lady of Peace services.

In addition, CoventryCares terminated the contract with Taylor Regional Hospital, one of KentuckyOne's managed facilities, also without cause. KentuckyOne Health leadership strongly believes that Medicaid recipients in the Commonwealth should have access to quality health care via a comprehensive network of provider and community organizations in order to achieve improved health outcomes. We feel CoventryCare's actions will ultimately hinder and prevent the care our communities need and deserve. That is especially true when a plan would put our most vulnerable patient populations at Our Lady of Peace (children and adults with complex mental health needs) at risk.

Where are Our Priorities?

Scenter Stage

Teresa Scenters, Publisher

On Monday the Madison County Sheriff's office issued the following statement.

"It has been brought to our attention that several are planning on attending the court proceedings for Mr. Gary Foster concerning the torture charges in the 'Lucky the Cat' case. We have also been advised that several have made statements that they intend on bringing golf clubs as part of a sort of protest or statement. Please let us be clear that the Madison County Sheriff's Office took and still takes the investigation and prosecution of this case seriously however the security and order of both the courtroom and courthouse is our responsibility as well.

Many of us here at the Sheriff's Office are devoted pet owners and sympathize with everyone's tempered emotions, but let it be clear of the following:

No weapons or any items out of the norm that may be construed as a weapon will be allowed past our initial security stations into the courthouse. No outburst or disruptive behavior will be allowed to disrupt court proceeding in the Hall of Justice and in the court room itself and any person or persons disrupting the courts will be escorted out of the courthouse.

Please know that it is your right to attend all proceedings that are not closed to the public by direction of the courts, but attendance will be orderly and the security of the court and those attending will be maintained without question.

Please honor Lucky as professional and a peaceful advocacy and not an angry, out of control Mob."

How many protesters do you suppose showed up at court for the last child or elder abuse case?

It breaks my heart that animals get mistreated, I hope and trust the man who beat that poor little kitten will face the full consequences of his actions.

That being said, doesn't it make you wonder where all the noise is when another human being, especially a child or an elderly person has been damaged physically and emotionally?

Maybe it's simply that people feel more able to reach out in the case of an animal. It's certainly way easier. When you think about adopting a kitten or a child, well there's obviously no comparison. Even when it comes to donating time and money, animals are easier. You can go into the shelter, see a puppy, pet it and the puppy will wag its tail and yap at you. It doesn't work that way with humans, the gratitude probably won't be as forthcoming.

A tiny, puny, starved and beaten kitten with sweet eyes and paws too big for his fur ball body is easier to take care of than a child or an unhappy, schizophrenic old lady who needs to wear diapers to get through the day. It's not right but that's how it is.

While I think God expects us to take care of all His creatures we should most especially be taking care of each other.

Forest Management Essential

The great outdoors

Clint Patterson, College Forester

Thanks to the rough terrain in the Knobs and Cumberland Plateau, large swaths of undeveloped forest land remain near Berea, particularly towards the east and west. These areas provide valuable scenery, wildlife habitat, green space and forest products to area residents and beyond.

Most of the forested tracts around Berea, including the Berea College Forest, are privately owned, and are no doubt treasured by their owners for various and overlapping reasons. Some may primarily treasure these tracts for their investment value, while others may enjoy the privacy and aesthetics that they provide.

Kentucky, nearly fifty percent forested, supports a tremendous hardwood resource. Unfortunately, far too many of these forests are diameter-limit cut, or "high graded". These harvesting techniques, as a rule of thumb, "cut the best and leave the rest" and they represent the opposite of good hardwood forest management.

These harvesting techniques, which are widespread across Kentucky and many other states, are rapidly degrading our forest resource. They are converting our valuable, high quality hardwood forests into residual stands dominated by less desirable species with inferior genetics and poor quality stems.

This reduces timber value for future generations. It also causes reduced mast production for wildlife, reduced erosion control capability, and reduced aesthetic value, while making the forest vulnerable to insect and disease problems and invasive species.

Before coming to Berea, my primary responsibility as a District Forester for the Illinois Department of Natural Resources was to assist private forest owners with the management of their forest land. This involved writing forest stewardship plans, marking timber for harvest, administering cost share programs, and helping landowners to implement forest stand improvement and tree planting projects.

As the Berea College Forester, my forestry responsibilities do not permit me to provide private forest management assistance. However, Kentucky is set up much like Illinois in providing forest management assistance. If you are a forest owner, but not currently working with the Kentucky Division of Forestry to manage your forest land, I would encourage you to consider it. Their website is: www.forestry.ky.gov.

Another excellent source of information, as well as assistance, is University of Tennessee Extension: <http://www.ca.uky.edu/forestryextension/>

Forests take a long time to grow, and careful consideration should be taken before deciding how and when to harvest trees. And forest management isn't just about harvesting. It also involves invasive species control, integrated pest management, tree planting, wildlife habitat management, and other activities.

Long Odds for Community Center

Letters from Berea

Beth Myers Editor

It really is a wonder that humans can get anything done as a group. I watched two groups this week work to find some common ground on different issues -- one with more success than the other -- and I found myself amazed again that people often find ways to work around their differences.

My sisters and I could barely hold it together to host a 50th anniversary celebration for my parents -- of course, siblings should probably be put into another social category from regular relationships. One where people are forced to live together for 18 years, ride in back seats together for 18 hours, and always required to call on birthdays.

But I digress.

The two groups I watched work together this week were the people attending a city council work session where a possible community center type thing was discussed, and the residents of Elm Street who were setting up a Neighborhood Watch group. I have a great deal of confidence that the Elm Street residents will meet and exceed their goals. Can't say the same about the other group.

Many of the people who attended the work session had served on a city committee to evaluate different buildings around town to see how they could meet the needs of different groups in Berea. These needs could possibly range from tourism looking for a place to buy to hold Learnshops and other possible events, to some members of the business community interested in a possible convention or meeting center for outside groups that would pay for its usage. The discussion has been going on for years, as people bring up many reasons why Berea needs a type of community center, but have far fewer ideas when it comes to funding its development.

A couple of committee members spoke up of how difficult it was to evaluate these spaces, when it was unclear what programming would take place there.

Yeah, what they said.

That pretty much sums up the ball game when it comes to this elusive but much debated potential community center/basketball court/workshop facility/convention center/public meeting space. By asking for a plan for the space, and an idea of what program would take place inside of it, participants pretty much stuck their thumb on why this issue has not gotten much traction for the past several years.

Fact is, only by keeping the programming vague was this committee of community representatives able to get any site evaluation done at all. If programming had been spoken of off the bat, all the different agendas would have started stirring, shifting their eyes around and stomping to claim territory rights.

We've got the Tourism Department looking for space for their Learnshops or a possible space for their artist incubators; then you've got the rowdys who want to make darn sure that tourism doesn't spend any money on a building unless it's stamped "rainy day fund". Then you've got the Chamber and other business interests who would like to see a possible convention center or at least a place where outside organizations can come for large meetings of over 200 people. And Parks and Rec would just like to have a basketball court where the kids could play.

And the only type of facility in Berea that would possibly come close to meeting all these needs is the candle factory at the low, low price of $6 - $7 million.

Hmmmmmmmm.

With tourism as the only monied entity in this bunch, things get even more fun. While all parties and agendas would like to be treated equally, fact is, only one's got the dough and money talks while unfunded agendas balk. And this is a time when many Bereans don't even want to raise taxes for a city school that needs new classrooms, so I don't see voters going for a tax for a community building.

In the end, tourism may get the space that works for them, though they'd have to grind their teeth through some rants by a few city council members. Parks and Rec. may get something of what they need as well, because they and tourism play very well together. But I don't expect all those other agendas floating around to find a resolution.

In this political environment, people hoping for a community center and/or convention center better play the long game, because they're definitely playing the long odds.

"Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." - Galatians 6:9

with people sitting in front of their computers, they don't know their neighbors. That's why I suggested a potluck. You may not remember everyone's name, but you'll remember faces, and you'll know when you see a face that doesn't live here."

Like many neighborhoods in Berea, Elm Street residents have faced having their homes and cars broken into at different hours of the day or night during the past several months. At the meeting Tuesday, Clark told the attenders that there probably wasn't one person on their street who hadn't been affected by a robbery. John Stamper, who has been tied to robberies in other parts of Berea, was arrested for two robberies on Elm Street and is currently in the Madison County Detention Center. However, the infamous Friday night when many homes were hit occurred after Stamper's arrest. The neighbors and police are fairly certain of who was responsible for those robberies, but lack of evidence has kept him from being arrested. The suspect has frequented Elm Street during the last several weeks.

"Do you think you'll have enough to keep him in jail?" one neighbor asked, regarding Stamper.

Clark did not have good news for him.

"I call it catch and release," Clark said, of the cost saving measures that had been put into place by the Kentucky General Assembly. "You catch these crooks, but with non-violent offenders, they're released right away."

Most of them, Clark said, do not carry guns, because then it automatically becomes a felony.

Acevedo remembers neighbors coming out of their homes on that Friday night, when they found themselves gathering around and talking about what they could do.

"We felt so helpless," Acevedo said. "But when we got together and started sharing our stories, we started to feel stronger."

A group of them went down to the police station to talk to Clark, and he encouraged them to hold the potluck where he could present information about the Neighborhood Watch. As people circled around the food Tuesday evening, several of them meeting for the first time, they talked about the affects of some of the robberies, including someone who had gotten their medications stolen.

"Neighborhood Watch is watching out for everybody," Clark said, when people had settled down after eating. "It's neighbors taking care of neighbors and the best way you can accomplish that is by getting to know each other."

Clark informed the Elm Street residents that they would receive Neighborhood Watch signs, once they contacted him with a spokesperson of their group. He told them that Elm Street was still on the extra patrol list at the police department, because of the recent unsolved robberies, so they would hopefully continue seeing more police cars around.

"Now if you saw a strange car driving around today, that was me," Clark said, describing his car.

"I got your license number and wrote it down," one woman said, causing the other attenders to laugh.

Clark stated he was glad someone had noticed him, since being observant was a key part of the Neighborhood Watch.

"Develop a phone tree and an email tree," Clark said. "Stay connected to each other, get to know each other and eventually you'll trust each other to the extent that you'll watch each other's houses when you're away."

Concerning the suspect in the robberies, who hung out at a home on Elm Street, Clark suggested involving other agencies besides the police. He pointed out that people could report things to the codes department, such as high grass. If children were involved, and there were safety concerns, social services could be called.

"If a social worker is called, they'll often ask for a police escort," Clark said. "Then we can escort them, and if there's something suspicious in plain sight, we can call immediately and get a search warrant."

Most of these robberies, Clark reported, were connected to drug use. When one resident pointed out that they had nothing worthy of stealing, Clark informed her that all many of the thieves wanted was enough to buy one pill, and stuff could be taken to the flea market to raise that much.

Clark listed different safety measures the residents could take, including making sure their garage doors were always closed and locked.

"That's one thing that really irks me, is driving around Berea and seeing all these garage doors open," Clark said. "If I'm mowing my yard, and no one's in the house, I lock my door. That person can get in and steal something before you come back around."

He told residents to never leave a key anywhere outside, to secure sliding glass doors to keep them shut and to keep shrubs trimmed so they didn't cover up windows. When people asked about locks on their storage sheds, Clark stated that almost every criminal would have a sledge hammer and bolt cutters.

Clark informed the Elm Street residents that they could choose how often they would get together, but the most important thing was watching out for each other and staying connected through phone trees or email lists.

"It's been great getting to know my neighbors," Acevedo said, "that's been the best part. We've felt more unified as a neighborhood."

public outreach and education, the cheaper part of the program, and also more expensive components such as monitoring and eliminating any sediment or trash that goes into the drainage system, as well as monitoring developers and contractors who will have higher standards to meet on how they treat runoff.

"We'll make this as cost effective as possible for you," Camargo said. "We've developed this for other communities so there are models we can use. But this will impact every department in the city including streets and roads, your health department, parks and recreation as well as outside groups such as your developers and engineers, Berea College, who will be required to do a bit more to meet higher compliance standards."

The City of Berea will be entering in the middle of the five year permit cycle, but will not be expected to complete all the requirements in that time.

"Is there a trend for cities that you've been working with in adopting a particular funding method," Mayor Steve Connelly asked Camargo.

Camargo replied that the momentum for most cities involved with the Storm Water Management Program has been passing some kind of user service fee to fund the program, often attached to the water bill. There were some other possible funding methods that would be less consistent.

"There is no end to this," Camargo warned city council members. "The storm water management program will follow you around. You'll be stuck with it until the EPA gets disbanded."

Camargo stated that next steps for the City of Berea included submitting the letter of intent this week and forming a storm water advisory committee from the various stakeholders in Berea.

City council also heard from the site selection committee during their work session on Tuesday, the committee that was charged with checking out different properties in town to see how they would work for tourism activities, indoor recreational activities, meeting space and other needs that have been expressed by different groups. Council member Vi Farmer discussed the different properties -- the candle factory met more of the criteria in size and flexibility than any other. The price all together with the land and building, however, was $6 - $7 million. The Carpenter Building was discussed as a possibility, though parking is limited and renovation may be expensive. Churchill Weavers had some possibilities, though many parts of it would require a lot of maintenance and renovation. Some members of the committee appreciated its close location to the 9-hole golf course in Berea. Most of the other locations, such as Hays Furniture and the Amish Store, were rated as not meeting enough needs of the community.

Richard Bellendo expressed some frustration with the process, "We had so many uses that we were trying to put under one facility."

Connelly replied that the group hadn't been asked to find a place to meet all the required needs, but to simply evaluate all the sites. He reminded participants that the evaluation process came up because tourism had been checking into two locations, and the discussion of a possible community center came up as a partnership.

"My frustration was we had no idea what we were looking for," Jim Lucas said, a member of the committee. "Until a plan is laid out for claimants, until we get some tentative information, I'm not sure what we can do."

City council member Ronnie Terrill pointed out that how to pay for it would be the key.

Council member Virgil Burnside said, "It's important to see how the community can use it. We shouldn't just get a space for Learnshops, because we may not need the space for it in the future. We need to get a space that's flexible."

Terrill suggested moving on the Churchill property since it "was cheap".

Members agreed to keep up with the discussion.

City council also discussed the goal and objectives for the comprehensive plan, which was on the agenda for approval. The comprehensive plan draft was developed by Berea Planning and Zoning and the comprehensive plan advisory committee. Burnside expressed concern about the plan, and council's limited time to really assess it.

"There's this whole section on promoting community agriculture," Burnside said. "Why identify this one in particular? What about entertainment and recreation that are concerns of other people? Why does this get so much attention?"

Director of the Berea Codes Department, Dale VanWinkle, replied that there was a large representation of sustainability people on the two groups, and that would have influenced the document.

"I'm very aware of that," Burnside said. "That's what I thought. But as a council we represent a broad spectrum. We have to make sure the whole city is covered. What about eating, arts and entertainment?"

VanWinkle suggested having another work session where the council could really work through the goals and objectives, and take the approval off the agenda for the evening. The council agreed they would like to have a longer period of time to work through it. VanWinkle will also invite the advisory committee and planning and zoning commissioners.

City council members approved several bids at their meeting. The Allen Company received the bid for street resurfacing of seven to eight streets in Berea, and laying down the shared use path to Indian Fort Theatre. They both came under budget, with a bid of $152,880 for the resurfacing and an approximate amount of $41,000 for the shared use path. The Allen Company also received the bid to pave the parking lot at the Berea Municipal Utilities Building for $57,593, and River City Controls received the bid for flow meters at the waste water treatment plant for $66,170. Richards Electric received the bid for high energy efficient lighting at the Folk Center for $15,812.

of students in that graduating class' freshman year and sophomore year. The number attending during the freshman and sophomore years are then divided by the number that graduate as seniors.

"This doesn't take into account the students who move," Coleman said, "or the students whose family moves. They go somewhere else, and graduate from another school, but we get penalized because they didn't graduate with us."

This especially hurts a small school, Coleman said, because every student can have such a big impact on the percentage.

"Each student affected us by two percent," Coleman said, who pointed out that if one more student hadn't moved, but graduated with the Berea class, they would have had an 82 AFGR.

School board members expressed appreciation to Coleman for explaining it, since they wondered at the 80 percent AFGR.

"Someone must have been mad at the world when they made this up," Bonderant said.

The school board approved an in-school diversion coordinator. This classified position will work with students who get pulled from the regular classroom because of behavior issues, as an alternative to suspension.

cent chance of obtaining a B or higher or a 75 percent chance of obtaining a C or higher in a corresponding college course. The benchmarks are 18 in English, 22 in mathematics, 21 in reading and 24 in science.

Berea compared very favorably to the state average, with 66 percentage in English compared to the state percentage of 52; 32 in math compared to 26 in the state; 55 in reading compared to 38 as the state average; and 26 percentage reaching the benchmark in science compared to the state percentage of 18.

"This is very good news for us, even though it's still not where we want to be," Lovell said, who stated that preliminary data indicated that Berea Community would rate in the top 20 schools with ACT scores.

Director of District Wide Services Debbie Coleman reported on the AFGR (Average Freshmen Graduate Rate) for the school board. The rate for Berea Community was 80 percent, but Coleman reassured the board that this did not indicate that Berea only graduated 80 percent of their seniors.

"Of the students who showed up as seniors," Coleman said, of the 2011 graduating class, "there were no drop-outs, 100 percent of our senior class graduated."

The AFGR, however, calculates the graduation rate by averaging the number tended the tax hearing, with the majority arguing against the property tax increase. A few who attended supported the increase, stating that it was a small price to pay for the education of the children in the community. The 4 percent increase in revenues, for a homeowner of a $100,000 house, would equal approximately $36 more a year.

The majority of the attendees were of retirement age, and many said they were on a fixed income and couldn't afford all the increases in cost while their income stayed the same. One attender made the radical suggestion that the school had only two choices, merging with the Madison County School District or charging tuition to out-of-district students.

On a 3-2 vote, board members decided to keep the property tax rate at 91.3, going up to 91.7 to capture the uncollected tax per the request of Superintendent Mike Hogg. School board member Elizabeth Crowe and chairperson Van Gravitt both voted to raise the tax rate up to 94, while Wagers, Will Bondurant and Jackie Burnside all voted for 91.7.

During board members comments at the end, Crowe said, "I'm disappointed in our vote on the tax rate. I voted for the tax increase because it's the right thing to do for the kids . . . We're not looking at good years to come financially."

Bondurant stated that he was not convinced that they needed to go to the 94 tax rate, and asked, "where do we stop with this thing?" Berea Community had raised the tax rate by four percent for the last 14 years.

Wagers stated that $68,000 wasn't that much to be collected, and she was concerned at how high the tax rate was already. Crowe later pointed out that the $68,000 equaled a teacher's salary.

Gravitt stated, "I'm glad to serve on a board that gets along. We can disagree on an issue, but then it's over and there's no problems."

The school board received bad news at the beginning of their regular meeting, when their bond agent, Glenn Brashear, reported that as of last week, Kentucky had decreased their FSPK (Facilities Support Program of Kentucky) from $264,000 to $247,000. This decreased Berea's bond potential by approximately $700,000.

Two weeks before, Hogg had reported to the board that they would have $3.2 million in bond potential that would allow them to build a new roof, get a new HVAC system for the elementary school and build three new classrooms. Three teachers are currently floating in the middle/high school. The state cut, however, dropped their bonding potential down to $2.5 million.

While many at the state level stated this was only a "temporary" cut, Brashear encouraged the board to act as if it was permanent.

"My experience is that it's awful easy to cut, and very difficult to put it back," Brashear said.

Hogg said, "As critical as the three classrooms are, they're not as critical as the HVAC system and the new roof."

The HVAC system has broken down a few times already this year, with the elementary school going without air conditioning for a few days the week before. The school has also spent quite a bit of money repairing the old roof at the school. Both of these projects, which would include some other energy efficiency measures as well, would cost approximately $2.5 million. The three classrooms would have cost the approximate amount that the FSPK was cut.

Berea Community's architect, Susan Hill, encouraged the school board to start on their BG-1, the project application, even though they might do the three classrooms if anything changed at the state level.

"My suggestion is that we go with the critical needs," Hill said. "To be able to bid this thing in January, we need to start now. You can always add the three classrooms to your BG-1 later."

The design team was discussing when the work would be done, since replacing an HVAC system was not ideal while students were attending school. They were discussing working during the second shift, and then the possibility of completing the work in the summer.

The board unanimously approved going forward with the BG-1, which would list the HVAC system replacement and the replacement of the roof.

Berea's Middle and High School Principal Donna Lovell and Guidance Counselor Eef Fontanez reported the good news on the ACT scores. From the junior class of 2011 to the junior class of 2012, the percentage of students reaching the college benchmarks for the ACT increased in all four content areas. In English, the percentage of students reaching the college benchmark increased from 63 to 66; in math, it increased from 28 to 32, in science it increased from 20 - 26 and the most dramatic increase was in reading, where 40 percent of students reaching the college benchmark increased to 55 percent.

A benchmark score in the ACT is the minimum score needed to indicate that a student has a 50 per-

Sandefur Shattering School Record

Above, Senior Sydney Sandefur accepts the game ball at the assembly in her honor at Berea Community. She broke the career goals scored the night before in the soccer game against Paris, where she not only broke the record with a goal, but scored two more to make a total of 104. The Lady Pirates are off to a 5-0 start, and this early in the season, predictions are that Sydney will set high marks for scoring.

By Jonathan Schinhofen
Citizen Sports Reporter

Some records in sports are made to be broken. World-record 100-meter times are hardly noticed because they are so short-lived. Some records last a while, like Babe Ruth's 60-home run season, which stood for 34 years. Some records defy description as we are hard-pressed to imagine a time or manner in which they can be beaten. Jerry Rice's career receiving yardage, for example, which exceeds the runner-up in that category almost by half.

A personal record of the latter variety might be in the making at Berea Community High School. Senior Sydney Sandefur has set the school career scoring record in girls soccer. Her 102nd goal came on August 16 against Paris. So did her 103rd. And her 104th. The old record of 101 had stood since 2003.

Players and coaches rightly brush aside predictions from sports reporters based on the athlete producing "at this rate" for the rest of the season. But sometimes the urge to extrapolate is irresistible.

The fact that Sandefur broke the record in just the second game of a 19-game regular season and that she is no stranger to the hat trick begs the question of how far she can go. Now five games into the regular season, she seems bent on making her first three exceptional years of high school soccer look downright pedestrian. Sandefur already owns the single-season scoring record at 42 goals. With 15 goals in 5 games, that record is in jeopardy again.

While Sandefur's numbers look good, her teammates are not simply standing by while she scores goals. The Lady Pirates have outscored their opponents 39-9 on their way to a 5-0 start. Sandefur said that senior Tonya Renzenbrink has been an important part of her success and the team's success.

Sandefur and Renzenbrink have been playing soccer together since they were 4 years old. Renzenbrink is a prolific scorer in her own right, so opposing defenses have to pick their poison when the two of them are on the field.

Students and teammates assembled in the gymnasium the day after Sandefur broke the scoring record to recognize her achievement. Her teammates presented her with the game ball, signed by each of them. Sandefur reacted with a mixture of pride in her achievement and embarrassment from the attention. Not wanting to add to that embarrassment, her parents Larry and Jennifer made a secret appearance to take some pictures and share the moment.

Despite the uncertainty starting the season with an inexperienced defense, the Lady Pirates have come out of the gate like they never have before. This year's Pirates have the potential to set the bar for years to come. If they keep it up, the team will set new high marks for wins and scoring.

The season is far too young to start predicting wild success. There are too many variables and nothing is ever guaranteed. But if one searching for wild successes, the next Lady Pirates soccer game, featuring Sandefur at midfield, might be a good place to start looking.

musicians played their favorite "party pieces" together. Several workshops were also offered on Saturday afternoon at Berea Center for the Arts and at the Music Makers Shoppe.

Beanie Odell, of the Red Willies, was enjoying the chance to meet other musicians and catch up with others that she had met during previous Celtic Festivals.

"I look forward to the chance to play with others. It's like meeting someone who speaks the same language you do," she said.

Berea has the international connections that can attract talented musicians and make festivals really special. The town also becomes special to the musicians who participate. The Berea Celtic Festival, with its small, intimate venues, offers them lots of opportunities to learn from each other and share their passion for music with the community. Musicians had traveled from all over to meet up, inspire one another, and get inspired themselves.

As is the case for many Berea events, the Celtic Festival drew tourists from out of town, including accidental tourists Skip and Nancy Munz, who were in from Los Angeles visiting family.

"We checked for things going on," Skip said, "and got lucky."

Larry and Brenda Dell, on their way home to Wisconsin, were dancing to the music on the patio at Main Street Café while waiting for their meal.

"We love to stop in Berea," Brenda said. "We try to stop here every time we pass through."

The Dells saw a flyer about the Celtic Festival and decided to come check it out. Larry even bought a kilt from one of the Festival's sponsors, the Kilted Crow. "You never know what you're going to find when you come to Berea," he said, and Brenda agreed, "We always get to enjoy something unique and fun."

The Berea Celtic Festival is organized by Dan Cummins, Beverly Buchanan, Jennifer Balcom, and Sune Frederickson. Cummins and Buchanan are the duo "Liam's Fancy, Balcom plays Celtic harp, and Frederickson owns Main Street Café and Berea Center for the Arts. They have put on the festival every third weekend of August for three years running, and plan to continue in future years.

Participating musicians played Friday and Saturday nights on stage at Berea Center for the Arts. Beverly Buchanan explained that during these "open sessions," musicians move in and out of the circle to play songs together and teach each other new pieces. "Most musicians have a 'party piece,'" she said. "It's the one number that you love and that you know in and out."

Events like the Celtic Festival have an exponential impact on quality of life in the community. "The festival draws musicians that are passionate about what they do," Sune Frederickson said. "We would like the community to be even further involved and for even more people to come and experience the event."

"It gives you a chance to sit back and enjoy, and dream your dreams," Sune swept his hand to indicate the perfect weather, the musicians, and a dancing couple. "In the long run, this can be a jewel."

Re-enactors, above, perform at the Battle of Richmond's re-enactment last year. This year, for the 150th anniversary, there will be a skirmish taking place on the Army Depot property for the first time. This was part of where the actual battle took place.

This Weekend's Re-Enactment Predicted to be One of the Best

If more is better, next weekend's Battle of Richmond re-enactment may be one of the best.

More re-enactors, more sutlers, a new skirmish and the return of a regimental field hospital will be among the Aug. 25-26 highlights. In addition, there are portrayals of Civil War luminaries, a special presentation on balloon observation and a variety of living history exhibits as part of the Saturday-Sunday events commemorating the 150th anniversary of the 1862 Battle of Richmond.

Some 350 re-enactors already are registered and will participate in the battle re-enactment at 2 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday. On-site registration could boost participation to 400 or more. Also, a special re-enactment is set for Sunday at 9:30 a.m. at the Bluegrass Army Depot.

The Sunday morning reenactment is sponsored by the Army Depot and, for the first time, will be conducted on Depot property where part of the actual battle took place.

Back, by popular demand, is a re-created Army field hospital, this time represented by the 6th Kentucky regiment. Visitors will see how Civil War wounded were cared for during and immediately following a battle.

Twenty sutlers (merchants supplying armies, troops) will be open to both re-enactors and visitors. And, a hot-air balloon presentation will show how this Civil War "air force" relayed information on deployments to commanders.

Portrayals of Abraham Lincoln, Gen. U.S. Grant and presentations on Civil War music, period stories and sketch artistry will be held in a Camp Meeting Tent. The First Kentucky Brigade Band also will perform both days and a Ladies Social is set for Saturday morning. The Mt. Zion Christian Church again will conduct its authentic Civil War Church Service on Sunday at 11 a.m. with a portrayal of and sermon by Berea College founder John G. Fee.

Boy Scout troops will conduct opening ceremonies on Saturday and Sunday and a special Court of Honor will be conducted at 4 p.m. on the 25th.

Living history programs will continue throughout both days, providing opportunities to learn how various tasks and activities – both military and civilian – were conducted during the war.

All events and activities are free and open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Battle of Richmond Association was formed in 2001 to preserve the history and heritage of the Aug. 29-30, 1862 Civil War Battle of Richmond. The battle was the second largest in Kentucky and the most overwhelming Confederate victory of the entire war.
